

The view from the garden of this property is quite different but you could quite easily sit there all day watching the world go by. Clearly, our clients thought the same and this is why they decided to have a terrace built.

This was our first project such as this and it was a very interesting experience. Moreover, it was a really rewarding experience. To see how this wasteland that had greeted us on day one could be transformed into the most perfect relaxing spot was fantastic.

We were faced with pretty serious access problems due to private lanes and the like, but having given our assurances for the final finishing, we were able to transport the many tons of infill material, blocks, sand, aggregate and final finish stones and transformed this piece of ground into a wonderful area to pass the hours and while away a wee glass of something along with a lazy barbeque time.

Hopefully you will see that the end product justified the work. Since then we have had several enquiries for similar.

Equally fortunately, our clients have asked to look at additional projects for later this year.
